Beta Sigma Phi Notes

Shown above is Cheryl LeGrand, left, and Diana Williams, right. Cheryl is accepting a yellow rose, the flower of Beta Sigma Phi, from Diana, who is the President of Delta Zeta for the coming year. Cheryl is a new pledge and we are so happy and proud to have her as a member.

Beta Sigma Phi is an organization that has been around Appomattox for a long time - 10 years in fact. Our chapter, Delta Zeta, is one of many throughout the world with 250,000 members plus. Many illustrious women are members including Mrs. Barry Goldwater, Margaret Chase Smith, and Miss Linda Vanlyke, 1963 Miss America.

Our members come from all walks of life, making the chapter so much richer, in human experiences. Our motto on the crest shown above is "Life, Learning, Friendship", and as members we try to follow the guidelines of the motto.

In the last several years, Delta Zeta has been growing quietly, but rapidly. Some of our new members are pictured above.

The next article will discuss the chapter's service projects.

Energy Saving Tips For The Week

FROM THE VIRGINIA ENERGY OFFICE

If you do buy synthetic garments, choose those that require little or no ironing to conserve the energy cost of upkeep.

When installing outdoor lighting, check into mercury vapor lamps which surpass considerably incandescent lighting in efficiency and life span.

Save energy by cooking double recipes for meals like salads, soups, spaghetti sauce or stews. Refrigerate or freeze half for future use.

Whenever practical, use a steamer or pressure cooker to prepare several foods at the same time. Many such utensils have partitioned inserts to allow cooking several vegetables simultaneously.

Food Shopper

by Cathy B. Hinton
Va. Dept. of Agriculture & Commerce

The bargains are there if you open your eyes! That's right, if you start comparing today's food prices to last year's food prices you'll make some amazing discoveries. Of course, sugar prices are up and such items as canned goods are higher in price. But, have you compared fresh meat and turkey prices to last year?

Getting into the beef category specifically you will see much lower prices than last year. For example, approximately one year ago boneless chuck roast sold for $1.67 per pound while now it averages around $1.28 per pound. Another item to compare is ground beef which is included on just about everyone's weekly menu. One year ago it sold for $1.09 per pound while this year it's selling for an average price of $.87 per pound. These figures are taken from the Va. Dept. of Agriculture & Commerce retail price survey done in the Richmond area.

Checking the turkey area you'll find prices are running lower than last year plus turkey is an advertised special many times throughout the year. It's a very economical and versatile protein choice. Finally, we've gotten away from the traditional turkey at holidays only. Now it's turkey year round from roast turkey with all the trimming to barbecued turkey. Don't forget that when large turkeys are on sale have your butcher saw it in half and save half for a future meal.

Fresh produce prices fluctuate throughout the year with price and supply predictions continually changing. Two of the big bargains that are currently good buys are white potatoes and yellow onions. Yellow onions are running as low as $.05-$.07 per pound with many store featuring the ten pound bag. Both of these items can be included in the menu in numerous exciting dishes. Soups, casseroles, and vegetable side dishes are just a few ideas.

Next time you make up your weekly menu check the advertised specials in your newspaper for turkey, potatoes and onions listed at low prices. Be sure and include them on your shopping list.
